

Eileen Sharaga, B.S. M.A. is president of Career Resources and a recognized authority on career development and employment trends. As a career psychologist, consultant and educator, Ms. Sharaga works with individuals, businesses, college grads and professionals in all aspects of career development.

The depth of her work comes from her own personal experiences as her careers have spanned 6 different industries which include advertising, marketing, finance, technology, education and executive recruitment.

With a Master degree in counseling and career development plus two decades of experience in business and industry, Ms. Sharaga provides a unique perspective in navigating today's complex world. Having both a psychological and business background, she provides a unique perspective into penetrating the deeper patterns of careers and the workplace.

Her corporate background includes 10 years as an executive recruiter in the advertising and marketing industry, product manager for Revlon, executive director of a national trade association, national marketing director of a telecommunications company and career consultant at Right Management, an international outplacement firm.

Recognized as an expert on career and workplace issues, she has delivered over 300 speeches and workshops to corporations, professional associations, alumni associations and civic groups. These include: Harvard, Yale and Princeton Universities, Association of Management Consultants, IBM, American Marketing Association, Greater New York Hospital Association, Society of Engineers, Ad Club of N.Y., Women in Communication, New York Hall of Science, The New Jersey Bar Association, Society for Marketing Professionals, Security and Exchange Commission, Women's Media Association, N.Y. C. Board of Education.

Ms. Sharaga has been on the faculty of The Parson's School of Design, Long Island University, The CUNY Research Foundation, Marymount College, The New School University, La Guardia Community College, Touro College and American Women in Economic Development.

Writing extensively on career management issues, she has written by-line articles featured in Marketing Review, Chemical Engineering Progress, Women's Business and quoted in the Wall St. Journal, Working Today and The New York Times. Most recently, she has appeared on Fox Five News, "Getting York Money's Worth" and guest career expert on Sirius Radio.

Ms. Sharaga is currently engaged in gathering research for her book entitled "The New Career Frontier."